

THE SUMERIAN WORLD

EDITED BY HARRIET CRAWFORD

The Sumerian World

The Sumerian World explores the archaeology, history and art of southern Mesopotamia and its relationships with its neighbours from c.3000 to 2000BC. Including material hitherto unpublished from recent excavations, the articles are organised thematically using evidence from archaeology, texts and the natural sciences. This broad treatment will also make the volume of interest to students looking for comparative data in allied subjects such as ancient literature and early religions.

Providing an authoritative, comprehensive and up-to-date overview of the Sumerian period written by some of the best-qualified scholars in the field, The Sumerian World will satisfy students, researchers, academics and the knowledgeable layperson wishing to understand the world of southern Mesopotamia in the third millennium.

Harriet Crawford is Reader Emerita at UCL's Institute of Archaeology and a senior fellow at the McDonald Institute, Cambridge. She is a specialist in the archaeology of the Sumerians and has worked widely in Iraq and the Gulf. She is the author of Sumer and the Sumerians (second edition, 2004).

Guillermo Algaze obtained a Ph.D. in Mesopotamian and Near Eastern Archaeology from the University of Chicago in 1986, and has taught in the Department of Anthropology of the University of California, San Diego since 1990. He is interested in the comparative archaeology of early civilisations and, in particular, in how pristine states form, and how those states, once arisen, spur the further growth of second-generation states in their vicinity.

Azzam Alwash left Iraq in 1978 to escape the Baathist regime, taking with him impassioned memories of times with his father among the resilient Marsh Arabs that would inspire a life of environmental activism aimed at restoring, protecting and preserving the delicate balances within Iraq's ecosystem. Prompted by the release of a United Nation's Environmental Program's report in 2001 that detailed the desiccation of the Mesopotamian Marshlands, he and his wife, Dr Suzie Alwash, founded the Eden Again Project, now Nature Iraq, of which he is director.

Julia M. Asher-Greve has received a Ph.D. in Near Eastern Archaeology, Assyriology and Classical Archaeology from the University of Basel; she also studied art history and has co-directed a transdisciplinary research programme for the Swiss National Foundation of Sciences. She taught as lecturer in gender studies at Hamburg University, as associate professor and research associate at Harvard University, and recently at the University of Vienna. She is the author of Frauen in altsumerischer Zeit (1985), which has recently been chosen by the American Council of Learned Societies to be included in the History E-Book Project. She was the co-founder and editor of NIN – Journal of Gender Studies in Antiquity (Styx/Brill) and has published a variety of both specialised and transdisciplinary articles on women, men, gender, and body and has just finished a book on goddesses co-authored with Joan G. Westenholz.

Christoph Bachhuber is a Postdoctoral Fellow in Archaeology at the Joukowsky Institute for Archaeology and the Ancient World at Brown University. He has held fellowships and teaching positions at the British Institute at Ankara and the University of Oxford, where he completed his doctorate in 2008.

Nicole Brisch (PhD University of Michigan 2003) is an independent scholar. Her research interests include Mesopotamian literature, the socio-economic history of the Ur III period, and Mesopotamian religion. She is the author of Tradition and the Poetics of Innovation: Sumerian Court Literature of the Larsa Dynasty (c.2003–1763 BC) (2007) and the editor of Religion and Power: Divine Kingship in the Ancient World and Beyond (2008). She is currently preparing a study of ritual and divinity in early Mesopotamia.

Robert Carter specialises in the archaeology of Arabia and Mesopotamia, with particular interests in the Ubaid period and early seafaring. He has previously published extensively on maritime trade networks of the Ubaid period and the Bronze Age, but has broad interests that extend from the Arabian Neolithic to the Late Islamic period, encompassing archaeological ceramics, interregional interaction, cultural transmission, urbanism, state formation and pearl fishing. He has recently taken up a new role as Senior Lecturer in the Archaeology of the Arab World, at UCL Qatar, a new campus of University College London, which is part of Hamad bin Khalifa University.

Paul Collins is Assistant Keeper for Ancient Near East at the Ashmolean Museum, University of Oxford. He has a Ph.D. from University College London and has worked as a curator in the Middle East Department of the British Museum and the Ancient Near Eastern Art Department of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York.

Lisa Cooper is an Associate Professor of Near Eastern Archaeology at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, Canada. Her research interests include the material culture of the Bronze and Iron Ages of Syria, as well as the history of archaeological exploration in Mesopotamia during the twentieth century. Her book Early Urbanism on the Syrian Euphrates (2006) investigated the appearance and demise of urban settlements in the Upper Euphrates River Valley of Syria during the third millennium BC.

Harriet Crawford specialises in the later prehistory of Mesopotamia. She has worked extensively in Iraq, Bahrain and Kuwait. She taught at the Institute of Archaeology, UCL, and remains an Honorary Visiting Professor there. She is also a Senior Fellow at the McDonald Institute, University of Cambridge. Her publications include Sumer and the Sumerians (2004) and Dilmun and its Gulf Neighbours (1998).

Graham Cunningham is a research fellow at the University of Cambridge, specializing in the linguistic and cultural history of the ancient Middle East. In addition to his own publications, he has contributed to three major collaborative projects: A Concise Dictionary of Akkadian, the Electronic Text Corpus of Sumerian Literature and the Corpus of Ancient Mesopotamian Scholarship.

Benjamin R. Foster is Laffan Professor of Assyriology and Babylonian Literature and Curator of the Babylonian Collection at Yale University. He is author of a number of books on the social and economic history of early Mesopotamia and Akkadian literature. Publications include Before the Muses (third edition, 2005), The Epic of Gilgamesh (2001), Akkadian Literature of the Late Period (2007) and Civilizations of Ancient Iraq (2009).

Lamia al Gailani Werr is an Iraqi archaeologist living in London. She is an honorary associate research fellow at the Institute of Archaeology, UCL. She worked in the Iraq Museum in the 1960s, and returned to Baghdad again in 2003–04 after the looting to assist her former colleagues. She is an expert on cylinder seals and has published many articles on the subject. She also runs the specialist NABU publishers.

Marlies Heinz has been Chair of Near Eastern Archaeology at the Albert Ludwigs-University, Freiburg, Germany since 1995. Research interests include architecture and space design; the worlds of power and ideology; materiality and the world behind; and tradition and change. She has been involved in the excavation of Kamidel-Loz in Lebanon since 1997.

C.C. Lamberg-Karlovsky is the Stephen Phillips Professor of Archaeology and the past Director of the Peabody Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology at Harvard University. Over the years he has directed archaeological survey and excavations in Syria, Saudi Arabia, Turkmenistan, Pakistan and Iran. His interests focus upon the nature and interactions that brought different archaic states into spheres of cultural interaction.

Jean-Claude Margueron has been Directeur d'Etudes à l'Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes since 1985 and has directed excavations at a number of sites including Larsa, Emar and Ras Shamra. He was the director of the French archaeological Mission to Mari for twenty seasons from 1979 to 2004 and has published extensively on his work there. His most recent book on the site is Mari, métropole de l'Euphrate, au IIIe et au début du IIe millénaire av. J.-C. (2004).

Kathleen McCaffrey studied religion at Claremont Graduate University and ancient Near Eastern Studies at the University of California, Berkeley. Using a synthesist approach that integrates textual and material evidence with gender theory, she focuses on intersections of gender and religion in early Mesopotamian culture and on studying the most curious historical artefact of all, the modern Assyriologist. Her latest publication, The Female Kings of Ur, examines how twentieth-century gender expectations filtered and framed interpretations of texts and artefacts from the Royal Cemetery at Ur.

Augusta McMahon is a Senior Lecturer in Ancient Near Eastern Archaeology and History at the University of Cambridge. She has a Ph.D. (1993) and MA (1986) from the University of Chicago and a BA (1983) from Bryn Mawr College, Pennsylvania. She has participated extensively in archaeological fieldwork in Iraq, Syria, Turkey and Yemen, at a range of sites from a Neolithic village through complex urban centres. Since 2006, she has been Field Director of the Tell Brak Excavations, Syria. Her research interests include early urbanism, urban landscapes, prehistoric violent conflict, and human response to climate change.

Frances Pinnock is Associate Professor of Near Eastern Archeology in the Sapienza University of Rome, and is the Vice-Director of the Italian Archaeological Expedition to Ebla. Her main interests are Ebla and the pre-classical cultures of Syria, ancient Mesopotamia, women's roles in Syria and Mesopotamia. She has published a number of books and essays on Near Eastern art and archaeology.

Holly Pittman is Bok Family Professor at the University of Pennsylvania where she teaches the art and archaeology of the Ancient Near East. She also serves as Curator in the Near East Section in the University of Pennsylvania Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology. Her work focuses primarily on the visual art of the Bronze Age Near East and especially on the imagery of glyptic art.

Jennifer R. Pournelle develops multidisciplinary international research programs for the University of South Carolina's Environment and Sustainability Program. She has conducted fieldwork in nine countries, including Iraq. She currently leads The Seelands Archaeology and Environment Program in the south of that country. Her work has been featured in Science and The New York Times, and on The Discovery Channel and National Geographic Television.

Tonia Sharlach, a specialist in the Third Dynasty of Ur, holds degrees from Cambridge and Harvard. She is currently an Associate Professor of Ancient History at Oklahoma State University in Stillwater.

Alice Stevenson is currently a researcher in World Archaeology at the Pitt Rivers Museum, University of Oxford. Educated at the University of Cambridge (BA, Ph.D.), she specialises in the analysis of mortuary practices of the Egyptian Predynastic period and is presently undertaking research into Nubian A-group rituals. She has worked for the Egypt Exploration Society and has held teaching and research positions at the Institute of Archaeology, UCL. Her recent publications include The Predynastic Cemetery of el-Gerzeh (2009) and a co-edited volume on the Pitt Rivers Museum's World Archaeology collections (forthcoming).

Elizabeth C. Stone is a Professor at the Department of Anthropology, Stony Brook University. She has focused her research on the organisation of ancient Near Eastern – especially Mesopotamian – cities with an emphasis on the residential component. She has directed excavations at 'Ain Dara in Syria, at the Ayanis Outer Town in Turkey and at Mashkan-shapir and Tell Sakhariya in Iraq.

Claudia E. Suter studies ancient Near Eastern images and texts. Among her interests are visual and verbal communication, cultural identities and ideologies of ruling classes in pre-modern societies. Her publications include Gudea's Temple Building: The Representation of an Early Mesopotamian Ruler in Text and Image, "Between Human and Divine: High Priestesses in Images from the Akkad to the Isin-Larsa Period", and "Luxury Goods in Ancient Israel: Questions of Consumption and Production".

Jon Taylor is Curator of Cuneiform Collections in the Department of the Middle East at the British Museum.
